In passing through the city one sees some the fluest houses, rented I suppose to poor peop'r. I judge so from the fact of seeing the windows full of clothes, hung out to dry, and the number of rather hard looking faces of the inmates. Some of these boildings appear to contain from ten to fifteen families each.

In passing one on a sunny afternoon, I saw amoul of some eighteen years of age, in a poor tion that reminded me of juvenile days. An Armistice at Sebastopel.

Correspondence of the London Times. BEFORE SEBASTOPUL, Monday, March 26 Early on Saturday morning a flag of truce was sent in by the Albes, with a proposition to the Russians for an armistice to bury the dead, such were tying in numbers—five or six Russians to every Frenchman and Englishman—in front of the Round Tower and Mamelon, and, after some fieley, an answer in the affirmative was returned, and it was arranged that two bours.

Some of the finest voting five all the city have should be granted for collecting and carrying away, the dead on both sides. The news spread lor, and a burst et smoke from Gordon's batterie hat the a short time previously heralded the armistic. The instant the flags were hoisted, friend and foe swarmed out of the embracers. The Riffemen of the Allies and of the commy rose from their lairs in the riffs puts, and sauntered toward each other to behold their grim handiwork. The whole of the space between the Bussian lices and our own was filled with groups of unarmed so diery. One tall, fine looked old man, with a long grey beard and strangeley shaped cap was pointed out to me as Hetman of the Cossacks in the Crimes, but it did not appear as if their were many men of very high military rank present. The Russians were native grave and reserved, but they seemed to fraternize with the French better than with or isolves, and the men certainly got on better with our Alites then with the few private of our own regiments who were down toward the front.

with our Allies then with the few private of our own regiments who were down toward the front. But while all this civilty was going on we were walking among the dead, over blood stained ground, covered with evidences of recent fight. Blocken muskets, beyonets, cettouch-boxes, caps, fragments of clothing, straps and bells, pieces of shell, little pools of clothed blood, shot-röund and gaspe—shattered gabions and sand bags, were visible around us on every side, and through the midst of the crowd staked a solemn procusation of solders bearing their departed commades

In the town we could see large bodies of soldery in the streets, as embled at the corners and in the public places. Publibly they were ordered out to make a show of their strength. The Russians denied that Prince Minach koff was dead, but they admit the that Admiral Isturmin was killed. He was one of the principal officers engaged in the destruction of the Turkish fleet at Smope, and the Czarhad rewarded him by given him an order of St. Grorge, of higher distinction than that were by Prince Menschikoff, and of a class which is generally accorded only to successful Generals who have conducted an army and closed a triumphant campaign.

We notice in the Wesconsin of last evening, the follow ing remark, in its market article:

Nearly helf the wheat and flour of our city has already been put affort, and there is not much left in the kands of the farmers.

The first clause of the sentence a test surely have been On the 25'n us, we had at this por in store or on boards, 18,064 bits flours, and 525,639 but wheat. The resetypts to this time will make the figures up to (at least) 80,000 bits flours, and 830,000 but wheat. The figures of the 25th, however, included the saccust which had already gone on board at that date. We have shipped, up to last breating, 26 305 bits flour and 95,978 buts wheat, which, it will be seen is no such properties of the stock as the Wisconsin intimates; and leaving us still 45,495 bits flour and 439 784 but wheat.

As to the amount still in the hinds of farmers, it is a very difficult matter to form an opinion upon the subject, Dr. Allen, N Y. Dr. Dw. Perkins, Rom. N. Y.
